Gia Dulci

Cinematic dark pop · San Francisco Bay Area

"Most of us have a lot to be angry about...
I want my songs to give women somewhere to put the quiet anger we're expected to swallow."

Selected recordings

"if god was a woman"

3:26 · Explicit

An anti-patriarchy anthem, Gia Dulci traces existential despair to the everyday cost of patriarchy, political corruption, and capitalism. The final chorus is a climactic release of defiance in hundreds of harmony layers.

"Belladonna"

4:12 · Non-explicit

Slow orchestral swells gather around a sultry, unhurried vocal. The strings hold their tension like a James Bond theme, giving the track its air of glamour and unease.

"I Got A Man"

3:33 · Explicit

A steady midtempo groove carries Gia's soulful phrasing. The bass and beat give this R&B single a laid-back swing that suits an unhurried entrance or a late-night scene.

Short bio

Gia Dulci is a San Francisco Bay Area singer, songwriter, and vocal arranger who makes sultry, cinematic dark pop. Her voice floats with cinematic strings over heavy synth bass, then gathers into harmonies with the force of a choir. Drawing on soul and R&B influences, she writes about the quiet feminine rage women learn to internalize.

Listener response:

"your voice over this super dark bass sounds like a fairy sitting on a dragon!"
